Contoro Robotics	N9710	We believe our technology will unlock the unlimited potential of teleoperation – the ability to remotely control robots from anywhere in the world. For the past 10 years, our CEO/Founder, Youngmok Yun, PhD, has led the development of a world class human-robot interface with the support of NASA and the National Science Foundation. Our approach uses various AI technologies and allows human operators to help in situations where the AI fails. The AI continues to learn from those human interactions, enhancing its automation abilities over time. Our technology can be applied to many industries, such as warehouse, factories, agriculture, home, and office services. Eventually we want to solve labor problems in previously impossible applications by combining robotics and human intelligence.

Mujin	N7568	Mujin is a robotics technology company, making robots more intelligent and more adaptable for today's rapidly changing global logistics scene. Our solutions are powered by MujinMI and MujinController, which deliver a teachless, no-programming interface to our customers that works with any industrial robot. With the backing of an 11 year old Japanese business, Mujin US started in the warehouse, helping logistics operations address major long-term challenges finding and retaining labor — because when robots take on dirty, tedious or dangerous tasks, available labor can be deployed more effectively. But we're not stopping there. We believe in a future where endeavors of any size can reap the benefits of intelligent automation, utilizing more prolific and capable robots.
